THE PROCLAMATION OF THE STATES OF
the Prouince of Vtrecht, against the Conspirators.

Auritus by the Grace of God, Prince of Orange, Count of Nassaw, Meurs, Buren, &c. Marquis of Camp-veere, and Flushing, Lord and Baron of Breda Dieft, &c. Gouvernour or Deputie of Holland, Zea-land, and Vtrecht, with the States of the Land of Vtrecht, send to all them which shall see or heare these presentes read, greeting.

Seeing there is of Late discovered an abominable, and most wicked Conspiracie, against the State, and well-fare of the Land, and that amongst others the Instigators and Conductors or principall Instrumentes haue beene these following, namely Hendrick Danielsson Slatius in former time Preacher at Bleyfwick: Adriaen Adriaensson van Dyck, which was here before Secretary of the said place: Cornelius Geſteranus in former time Preacher at Gorehum, and Cornelius Velfius, lately Preacher at Rackangie, which is a village lying in the Iland of the Briel. The Sonnes of the late Barnevelt, and Adriaen Vander Duffen of Rotterdam, are likewise accused of the crime afore sayd, besides many more, which are all fled intending to saue themselves in Brabant, or other Countries of our Enemies, so that they are not easily to be mett withall, although their apprehension is much required, and greatly necessary for the good of these vnited Prouinces.

So it is, that there is notice giuen by these presents that whosoever can reveale any one of them, or any of their complices, and assistantes which haue had a hand in this abominable conspiracy, and cause them a liue to be deliuered to the Justice, that he shall be rewarded with the sum of 4000. Guilders, which amounte to 400, pound sterling for each one of the persons which are here aboue named and described, and for any other they shall be recompensed with a summe of 600. Guilders, which amounte to 60. poundes sterling: And here besides shall the reuealers or Informers be pardoned of this crime if they be guiltie of it: and their owne persons and names shall shall not be made knowne to any.

We interdicte and prohibite likewise by these all manner of Personsto lodge any of the aforementioned (which hide themselues) or their complices, and assistantes which are culpable of this damnable and detestable Conspiracy, in their houses, or keepe, or suffer them in their Gardens, Ships, Boates, Haye Reekes, Barnes, or permit them to goe away with their Waggon, Horses, Carts, Sleds, or any such like serving to get away, either by Water, or by Land, vpon paine of life and goodes, and there shall not any fauour be shewed to any, although it were first knowne many yeares after.

Furthermore seeing it hath appeared manifestly by diuers informations, which the Commissioners authorised and appointed thereunto haue receiued, that the Arminians, or the Societie of the Remonstrants (as they instile them) haue in these Landes, a formall Court, or Colledge, wherein they meete, being also provided of diuers Commissioners, or chiefe vndertakers and a Superintendent: likewise it is confessed, that they haue diuers Commissioners in euerie Towne, and Citie, to gather the moneys amongst them of their owne Faction, of which they must make accompt to their Court where the Superintendent sittes with the other Commissioners. Moreover that some of their Societie had written to some of their Preachers in these Landes, that they maruailed mightily that some of them mayntained that their Societie might not right their cause by the way of violence: And they had therefore consulted vpon this point at their meeting, or Court, where they iudged that the sayd way could not be tryed without indangering the Country to her vtter destruction and ruine, neuerthelesse considering that they could not mend themselves (as they thought) in any other manner of wayes, and suspecting their Confraters, or Brothers to smell of Anabaptisme, or Memnonisme, (knowing that their opinion was hurtfull to their designs) they reiected them: Whereby, as likewise by that which is alreadie discovered of the aforesayd abominable and most detestable Conspiracy, as also, by the Enterprises, and Machinations of the hidden Preachers, aboue mentioned, and diuers others of their Societie, it appeareth evidently, that they have vsed all kind of sinister practises and deuises, to disturbe againe not onely the Church and State, but likewise to cause in these Countries an ineuitable or vnauoydable bath of blood, and to destroy these Prouinces afterwards by Incendiaries, or firers which should set seuerall places on fire, whereupon (when the Countrey should haue beene in this confusion and perplexitie) would our Enemy, haue assaulted vs, and inuaded the Country to make himselfe Master of it, which he hath not beene able to doe (God be praised within the space of these last 50. yeeres and more, although hee employed to the sayd purpose purpose great Armies, and charges, as it appeared likewise of late within these last two yeares.

Seeing also that a great while since it is perceiued, that diuers Arminian preachers which were here tofore banished, and led out of these Vnited Prouinces, haue emboldened themselves to returne hither againe (in such manner that there hath beene foure and twentie of them at once at Vtrecht) against the Proclamations of the High and Mighty Lords, the States Generall of the Vnited Prouinces, and goe disguised with strange habits in the Vnited Prouinces, and principally in this Prouince of Vtrecht, as well in the Citie, as the other Townes and Villages thereof, conuersing and walking there both day and night: Keeping also secret meetings, and conuenticles, in which they make euen their Sermons, (which are prohibited by the State) and prouoke there, and instigate the good Inhabitants of the Vnited Prouinces, and especially them of the Citie, the Townes, and the Lands of Vtrecht, to factions and commotions, and dissensions: as likewise to the disobedience of their Superiours and Magistrates: In such manner, that (which is great pittie) there are found some of their faction and Society, that haue lost the one which they did beare in former time to the Almighty, their Countrey, and Country-men, (before this Arminian Faction or Sect (rather) arose, living then Peaceably with their neighbours bours) and haue forgotten themselves so farre, that they haue beene plotters and chiefe workemasters of this most wicked and abominable Conspiracy, and made it ready to the execution, which had happened assuredly, if the mercifull God had not stopt their proceedings, through his infinite wisdom, and caused it to be reucaled in good time.

So it is that wee insisting vpon that which is aforesayd, prohibite moreouer (according to the tenour of the two former Proclamations of the generall States, one of them was dated the third of Iuly, 1619. the other the first of February, Anno 1620. and the resolutions, and interpretations made since vpon them) expressely, any manner of persons whatsoever, to appeare (vnder what pretext or colour soeuer) at any of those meetings, and conuenticles aforesayd, neither in the Citie, nor Townes, nor Lands of this Prouince, or to doe or say any thing which might in any manner of wayes preiudice the Land, or the Government: vpon the paines appointed by the Proclamations aforesayd, besides they shall bee accounted as perturbators of the State, and shall be punished according to their offence, and as the case shall require. Likewise wee charge that none shall presume to lodge any of the banished Preachers afore mentioned, which are also led out of the Country, nor any of their young propounders, or other which doe not stick to cause prohibited meetings, to preach, reade, or exhort in the same without permission.

As

As likewise to administer the Sacraments, and other Ecclesiasticall functions, nor cause or suffer them to come in their houses, gardens, hay-reekes, barnes, ships, boats, wagons, carts, or sleds: nor to hide them any where, be it by water or by land, vpon paine of banishment, or otherwise (as the fault shall deserue) to be punished, without that any long time shall excuse them although it were many yeares since discovered.

And because such persons may be the better reuealed and taken, they which shall discover them, (which are here last of all mentioned) shall be rewarded with the summe of 300. Gilders, which are 30 pounds sterling, and shall receiue them of the Country or State: and if they be guilty themselues they shall be pardoned, promising moreover, that their persons or names shall not be discovered. For wee haue iudged with a generall voyce this to be conuenient, and a fit remedy to preuent all further Conspiracies and wicked Machinations, and to aduance the welfare and preservation of these Lands, and their inhabitants.

And because the contents hereof may well be obserued and kept, and that none might pretent ignorance, We haue giuen order that this present Proclamation shall be published in all vsuall places as the custome is, and command hereby the President, and the Councell of Vtrecht, as likewise all Officers, Iustices, and ministers of Iustice, whom this may concerne, to proceede against the offenders, and cause likewise to bee proceeded against them without any connivency, favour, or dissimulation to the contrary.

From

From the Hage,

Febr. 8. 1623.

LOving Friend: knowing that there are dispersed amongst you strange speeches of the Prisoners here lately taken, I would not forbear to advise you the truth of the matter.

The Prince of Orange being two dayes agoe about the afternoone, at Ryswyck, there came three or foure Saylers which desired to speake with his Excellency, and hauing gotten accessse to his person, they related, that they were asked at Rotterdam, whether they would be imployed in a seruice for the good of these Countries, and were also promised great reward therefore.

They confessed moreouer, that they had accepted the said seruice, and had receiued certaine money thereupon, and that they were sent afterwards to the Hage, where they deliuered two dayes agoe their fire-workes and other things, at a house (vnto which they were directed) called the little foole in the Achterom, which is a street. And that they had spoken there with the party vnto whom they were directed to receiue further instruction: but he had not told the at the same time, what they should doe, wishing them onely to goe on to the businesse with a good courage, and promising that the next day the matter should be laid open vnto them.

They told moreouer, that they got of them at that instant certaine Dutch Riders of 21. shillings sterling a peece, which they shewed also to the Prince of Orange, and said that their great liberality made them to mistrust the goodnesse of this seruice, and caused them to suspect some treason or Conspiracy.

Hereupon the Prince commanded them to returne to the Hage, and to come towards euening to him at his Palace. Which they did, and informed his Excellency fully of all the businesse.

Whereupon he sent presently for the President, and the Councell of State, who forthwith (after some deliberation) sent the Attorney or Fiscall of the Court, with the Prouost Marshall, to the house or Inne aforesaid, where they found the persons by them deseribed, and the man which paid them the money aforesaid, whom they carried instantly to the Court, and examined them.

The Townesmen and the Souldiers within were presently commanded to keepe strong watches euery where, and to stop all passages that no body should come away without leaue. But it was not possible for them to preuent it, seeing there are no walls about the Hage. They searched also afterwards the Helmet (an Inne) about the Waggon which goe to Harlem, and when they asked for the man with his Trunks, the owner thereof went speedily vp into a chamber where it stood, and opening it, he tooke some things thereout, and leaving it open, came downe in great haste, and got out of the house, seeing that there was a Serjeant which told told to the rest, that he was an honest man, and that he had knowne him many yeares agoe.

When the Fiscall asked the Hoste whether there was not a man with a trunke in his house: he answered, no : But seeing they found afterwards the trunke, (open with diuers pistols and other things, as it was left by the owner) when they searched the house, the Hoste was taken prisoner, though the owner, the former Secretary of Bleyf-wicke had made an escape, as is aforelaid, the other were examined the same night, and he which payed the money to the Mariners confessed that there was one dwelling at Rotterdam which had set him on work, and having told his name and described his person, there went, about foure of the clocke in the morning. two Councillors of State with diuers others to find him out, but he was departed thence, & it is thought that the late Secretary of Bleyf-wick who was escaped had giuen him notice of the discovering of their conspiracy.

The examinations of the prisoners haue lasted yesterday, and this night and day, but their confessions are kept as yet very secret: there are found in the meane time many pistols, swords and daggers in the truncke aforelaid, and in the other Inne, and I haue seene some of them at the Court.

To day had the Preachers order to giue God thanks in their prayers for the discovering of this abhominable conspiracy of the enemies of the State.

The Mariners which haue reuealed this Treason, are glad that they haue cleared their conscience, and cast this burthen off their necks, making good cheare at the Castelayn of the Court his house.

I heare at this instant that there is now to bee made another search : of the successe I will aduise you with the next, if God giue me leaue.

Farewell,

From Amsterdam, Febr. 28. 1623.

Yesterday were 4. of the conspiracy executed at the Hage, one of them was beheaded and quartered, the other three were onely beheaded : to morrow we hope to get here the Copies of their sentences. The principall and the richer sort are as yet kept in prison, but it is generally reported that they shall follow the other very speedily.

They haue confessed that they would haue murdered first of all the Prince of Orange : secondly, changed the gouernment and Religion : thirdly, that they had correspondency and intelligence with the enemies : fourthly, that they would haue set on fire seuerall houses and townes.

Last Sunday, past through this City certaine Souldiers of Emden, which brought thence these following prisoners ; Abraham and Ian Blancert, and one William Pertil, carrying them by the way of Harlem towards the Hage.

A R E L A T I O N, OR The Light of February :

Wherein is to be seene,
The strange and abominable Conspiracy which was intended against the united Prouinces, and the Inhabitants therein : Reuealed by these foure honest men : Iohn Engelen, Iohn Faes, Ieroen Ewoutszon, Pieter Ianssen Broeck.

IT seemeth that the Almighty hath beene pleased many times to defend or preserue his Church not onely by meanes of the simple, but euen also by the actions of her owne enemies, as you may perceiue by this present Relation. And it is very well knowne to the Inhabitants of this Country, what kind of fellowes our Mariners are for the most part, and principally these 4. which discouered the treason, here before mentioned, to be very stout and resolute, and stained moreouer with the Arminian doctrine, as all the rest of the conspiracy, but I will not say that they are all stained which haue conuersed with them, with such a foule spot, as shall appeare by these and other good Patriots or well-willers of their Country.

But to come to the matter : It is to be obserued

that the eldest of these foure Mariners was called (by a nickename) Light, amongst the common people, which seemed to presage some thing, if the Prognostication had beene made before the effect appeared: but to leaue all friuolous things behind, and to relate shortly that which is past in these parts of the Low Countries, concerning the conspiracy aforementioned.

The 4. of February, in the yeere 1623. came to Rotterdam a strange Monster, in the shape of the former Secretary of Bleyswyck, hauing his belly filled with ranke poyson, as shall be published afterward by authority of the State to all the world: This wicked fellow who (as he thought) could alter his mouth & face into such countenance as he pleased, and change his voice as he listed, was acquainted with one of the Mariners aforesaid, but the Mariner could not feele presently with his woollen gloues what he carried vnder his cloak, as he did afterwards (by the grace of God) when his hands were naked. He told in the beginning to the Mariner, that it was a braue enterprise, & tending to the good of the Common-wealth, but (as hee said) it must be kept secret, and the reward would assuage or sweeten the labour and pains, and desired him therefore to find out three other lusty and resolute Saylers as he was himselfe, which he did at an instant, (seeing they know one another, and can certifie whom they dare trust with their liues, and will stand for a man when occasion shall serue) and brought them to him; where after some speeches betwixt them, the foure Mariners yeelded to their their employment in the sayd seruice. About the same time there came another (whom they neuer saw before) which after some conference gaue them 300. Gilders (which amount to 30. Pound sterling) a piece aforehand, onely vpon hope of good successe, which pleased the Mariners exceedingly well, and made them grow hot to the businesse: Hee added moreouer that after the enterprise was performed they should want neither goods nor money, and should each one of them besides be honoured with an office. After these faire promises made vnto the Mariners, the other two told them where they should receiue diuers Pistols, besides gunpowder, and Lead, or Bullets, with great store of Stilletos or murdering Daggers, and other such like things to pierce a harnessse of prooffe withall, and desired them to bring them in seuerall trunks to a certaine Inne at the Hage, which they performed with all possible speed, and diligence, for they packt these things secretly vp in trunks, and caused them in their company the 5. of February to bee carried from Rotterdam to Delft, and thence towards the Hage, where they brought them to the appointed Inne called the Helmet, and found there at the same instant their Master (which set them on work at the beginning) who bade them welcome, and made them good cheare.

In the meane time had he (who payed them the money) hired likewise foure other couragious and lusty Mariners, and had sent them with the like instruments and commodities put in trunks as the other, through the same passage towards the Hage, & charged the to meet at an Inne called the little Foole, (which they did) and were there well received and entertained with drinke and meate.

The sixt of this Moneth (O happy day) beganne the Mariners aforesaid to suspect the businesse, (without question through the inspiration of the Almighty) and to confer one with another about it, and concluded amongst themselves, that they would not enter any further into the said businesse, beleeuing it to be a foule peece of worke: And resolved thereupon that two of them should goe instantly to the Prince of Orange, to certifie his Excellency of the case, and to learne whether they were employed in the seruice of the Country or not. Comming with all possible speed to the Court in the Hage, they vnderstood that the Prince of Orange was gone to Ryswyck, (where some of his Horse are kept) they went thither presently with their tarred apparell, & sheaths of horne for their kniues, and other things, as the Saylers vse to weare in the Low Countries, and talking amongst themselves along the way, the time seemed very short vnto them at their arriual: And amongst the rest, they conferred together in what manner, and with what countenance they should speake to the Prince his Excellency.

When they were at the Stable of the Prince, they saw there diuers Lacquies and Yeomen of the Prince his Guard, and told them that they would faine speake a word or two with his Excellency; but no body seemed to giue greatly care vnto them, them, neuerthelesse there was one of the Lacquies, who laughing, accepted to tell the Prince of them and their desire, suspecting that they had some strange toy or thing to shew to his Excellency; who sent them word backe againe by the Lacquy, that he would heare them as soone as he came out of his stable: whereupon they answered, that they would speak with his Excellency about a businesse that concerned mightily his own person, and that there was perhaps danger in delay, (as the Ciuill Lawyers say) Periculum in mora: The Prince (who hath loued continually the Mariners) vnderstanding this, caused them instantly to come to him, where they made the best reuerence they could after their owne manner, and reuealed all the matter vnto him. Now you may guesse what the Prince thought of it, hearing of an enterprize of which he knew not himselfe: he commanded the Mariners to returne to the Court, by the way of Vorburg, which is a village about the Hage, and rode himselfe with all speed to the Court, where he communicated instantly this matter with the States. Hereupon was presently giuen order that the two Innes here before mentioned, should be searched instantly, and that all them which were within the two Innes should be ceased vpon, vntill such time as the heads and complices of this wicked enterprize should be found out. They got the money master or Pusser, (who payed the Mariners) at the Inne called the little Foole, the rest which were in the house are likewise apprehended, and I cannot heare as yet that any one of them is set at liberty. At the other Inne (where the Secretary of Bleyswick escaped) were euen also diuers apprehended, but they are all dismiss, seeing they were found innocent and cleare of this businesse. All the instruments aforesaid which were found in the two Innes, were likewise carried away by the Officers of the Court.

Concerning the Mariners, they were 9. dayes kept in the house of the Keeper or Castelain of the Court, vntil the States knew by examination that they were not guilty, and had behaued themselves as true Patriots and well-willers of the Country ought to doe, and discharged their consciences.

This night and the next day commanded the States strong watches to be kept, as well of the Townsmen, as of the Souldiers about the Hage, and the passages to goe thence: And they caused likewise a Proclamation to be published and printed as we haue heard before.

The next day being Wednesday, vpon the 8. of this Moneth, was the fasting and prayer day kept, whereof the States had warned the Country fourteen dayes before. This alteration seemed to cause a new zeale amongst the inhabitants, that all the Churches were packt vp so full, as the like was not seene by any man liuing.

About the euening came the Hangman into the Hage, to put some of the apprehended to the torture. The same day were likewise three of Barnevelts seruants taken prisoners, and the house of the widow of Iohn of Oldenbarnevelt as likewise that of Renier of Oldenbarnevelt his sonne guarded by certaine officers of the Court.

The 9. day of this Moneth were yet some at the Hage apprehended, and there came newes that two were taken at Rotterdam, and that some were fled thence, whereupon the Country was much perplexed.

The same day there came also tidings from Harlem, that there was made a great hole in the walls of the prison by some which were without, with a great augre, iust vpon the roome in which two Arminian Preachers were put about three weekes agoe, because they were come into the Dominion of the States, out of which they were banished.

The 10. and 11. day of this Moneth, were in all the Cities and Townes of the Vnited Prouinces the Proclamations of the States concerning this Conspiracy published, & euery where great paines were taken to apprehend the Authors and Complices thereof. In these dayes was the Lord van der Mylen sent for to come into the Hage, where he came freely, and is lodged now at the house of the Keeper of the Court, whereby it seemeth that hee is not suspected.

The 12. day of this Moneth when it was night, there were two poore Boers which saw Adriaen Adriaensson van Dyck, the former Secretary of Bleyswyck, wherevpon they went purposely to the Mayor of the place, who tooke him afterwards: whereupon the Boers got within few dayes the moneyes promised by the Proclamation of the States, for the discovering of him, namely 4000. Gilders, Gilders, which amount to 400. pounds sterling.

The 14. of this Moneth, the fore-mentioned Adriaen Adriaensson van Dyck sent for some of his Children and Kindred (a little before the Officers came to him out of the Hage) and confessed vnto them that he had deserued death, and cursed mightily the Arminian Preachers which seduced him, hee was yet the same day brought to the prison of the Hage by the Officers which came for him from the Court.

This day were the Sailers (which had vntill that time made good cheare at the house of the keeper of the Court) set at liberty, and each one of them was honoured of his Excellency with a peece of gold whereon was the Picture and Armes of the Prince with his Deuice, worth about 80. Gilders, which amount to 8. pounds sterling, as likewise with a siluerd Sword for each of them. The States moreouer caused to each of them to be giuen 600. Gilders which amount to 60. pounds sterling, besides a monethly pension of 16. Gilders, or 32. shillings sterling, during their liues: granting them moreouer their Letters of recommendation to the Court of Admiralty, for the first offices (of which they be capable) that shall fall. Whereupon they returned with great contentment to Rotterdam, and told their friends their fortune, and cloathed themselves there in gray suites of cloath, and bought there for their own wearing gray hats, with golden bands, as if they had bin Sea-Captains already.

The same day were the bells of the Town-house of the Hage rung, whereupon the two sonnes of Barnevelt were warned to appeare within the space of 14. daies; and to answer for themselves vpon paine of their banishment, & confiscation of their goods, according to the Lawes and custome of the Country.

The 15. day foure Citizens were apprehended at Leyden about this Conspiracy, and it was perceived that some of their consorts were fled.

The 16. of this Moneth was at the Hage a rumour that both the sonnes of Barnevelt were scene at Scheuelingen about the Sea-coast, with a skipper of their acquaintance who dwelt there, wherupon his Wife was apprehended in the absence of her husband and carryed to the Hage, where she confessed vpon examination that her husband departed the night before from his house with them: & search being made, it was found out presently that they went from Scheuelingen to Berckerhey, Catwyck, Naortwyck, Santvoort, Wyck op Zee, along a ditch towards the Sea, which is called the Hondsbosch, and came thence into the Island of Texel.

The 17. day of this Moneth was the town-house of Rotterdam fired very earely in the morning, at which time the Cutler afore mentioned got away among the people which came to quench the fire, he was taken, because hee had sold diuers Instruments and armes to the Conspirators. The other, namely the Tinker was dismist by the Lords, seeing there was at that time yet nothing found out wherewith they could charge him.

The Cutler went to diuers of his acquaintance, but no man would receiue him, and seeing hee is still

Still absent there is promised a future of them that shall cause him to be apprehended.

The 18. of this Moneth was the eldest son of Barnevelt taken in the Island of Texel, by the skipper aforesaid, and one of his men.

The 19. being the next day, he was brought to the Hage and put in prison, where he was examined since, but we cannot heare as yet any thing of his confession.

The 20. of this Moneth were all the prisoners which were taken about this Conspiracy examined by the Iustices of the Court.

The 21. were at Ouwerkerke, a village, yet two other taken of this Conspiracy, namely David Carenwinder Secretary in former time of Berckel, and the Boer which lodged him. They were carried likewise the same day to the prison which is in the Hage, where there are (masters and servants) at least twenty, apprehended for this Conspiracy.
